

EASTERN WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY

Asia University America Program

This month in AUAP classes, students learned about Native Americans, the United States as a New Country, and America's westward expansion. They focused on their reading comprehension, note-taking, and listening skills during their American Studies lectures. Additionally, students practiced and listened to reductions in English and built conversational fluency in small talk conversations, learned several TOEIC test-taking strategies, and began improving their paragraph writing skills in their Integrated English skills. In all classes, students were supported by EWU classroom volunteers and often had small group conversations.

A highlight this month was a visit to West Plains Roaster for their Career Exploration class, a local coffee shop in Cheney. The owner, Andy Labolle, gave his advice and shared his experiences of starting a business. During the first month of Career Exploration, students also learned about ways to describe themselves in English and their career aptitude.
